IAPMO Meeting Thursday May 24, 2012

Alpha Test of the Residential Natural Gas Heat Pump

John Clayton, Manager, Program Development, Southwest Gas Energy Efficient Technology Department, will be the IAPMO chapter speaker for the May IAPMO meeting.

Few in Southern Nevada realize the roll the natural gas utility, Southwest Gas, plays in new product development. Mr. Clayton will discuss one of these products - the residential natural gas heat pump.

The Natural Gas Heat Pump (GHP) works like any air-source heat pump that you might find on your home or business. However, instead of using electricity to fuel the heat pump’s operation this product will rely on natural gas.

What sets this unit apart is that it contains a natural gas engine that is combined with a patented “state-of-the-art” electronic control management system.

What this means to you, the GHP increases on the efficiency of your heating and cooling system, which saves on your overall energy bill and as an added plus saves on southern Nevada water resources.

Unfortunately, this product is in the alpha testing stage of its product development. This means the commercialization of the product is still two or three years away and will not be available until then.

The lunch is $20.00, non-members, company employees, guests are always invited, so bring a friend. Please RSVP to Bill Laub by Tuesday, May 22, 2012. If you RSVP and get on Bill’s list you get one free raffle ticket.

NOTE: We are in the west meeting room this month. Do not use the restaurant doors, or south doors. Use the doors that face west. THANKS.

Chapter Sponsors September IAPMO Conference
